PAPER EXPO CHINA 2010---MARKET FOCUS

China

In 2008, there are about 3,500 enterprises making paper and paperboard; the total production of 2008 reached 79.8 million tons, increasing by 8.57% compared to the production of 2007 which was 73.5 million tons; the consumption of 2008 was 79.35 million tons, increasing by 8.85% compared to 72.9 million tons in 2007. As China's economy is recovering, the domestic demand for paper is expected to keep growing in 2010, so as the paper and paperboard production; it is also estimated that many new building, rebuilding and expanding projects will begin in 2010.

ASEAN

The ASEAN develop very fast in recent years, with the economic integration being formed. The bilateral trading and investing activities between China and the ASEAN group keep growing, making the area the third largest trading region following the European Union and the Free Trade Area of America, as well as an important part of Chinese enterprises' strategy of "Going out". The Sino-ASEAN relationship has created huge opportunities for both sides. The development of ASEAN will surely increase the member countries' demands for paper and paper products, as well as increase their investments in paper-making industry. It will become a new huge market for China's and abroad enterprises to explore.

India

In recent years, the paper-making industry in India enjoys a fast development. Its production in 2008 reached USD5.5 billion; large scale enterprises numbered 591, whose production of paper and paperboard reached 8.3 million tons, with an overall growth rate of 8%. The Indian Paper-making Industry Association estimates that as the Indian economy develops faster and faster, and the developed countries shift their paper production to some developing countries including India, the Indian paper-making industry will keep growth at a double-digit rate in future years, with increased investment of over USD2.5 billion and production of 2 million tons.

Middle-east

According to incomplete statistics, Middle-east's demand for paper increases by 10% each year, and its printing industry grows by 15% each year. The large demand for paper will surely excite investments in the industry and thus increase the demands for paper-making equipments and relevant supporting products.

Welcome to PAPER EXPO CHINA 2010

The Paper Expo China is one of the important events for China's paper-making industry. Since the first edition held in 2004, the expo has been held in each year for six years, where the exhibitors and visitors from domestic and abroad can always find valuable opportunities to trade and communicate; because of the high attendance of international exhibitors and visitors, large exhibiting scale, strong professional focus and high level technical seminars, the Paper Expo China is exerting wide range of influence within the field and is respected as every year's great event for the paper-making industry.

The 7th edition is themed at "Exploration to the developing markets" and will be held in the Guangzhou Jinhan Exhibition Centre from June 28 to 30, 2010. The exhibition area is expected to reach 10,000 sqm and the show will gather over 300 exhibitors from domestic and abroad, including pavilions organized by associations of Shandong, Henan, Zhejiang, Fujian and Hunan; the show will also invite about 10,000 professional visitors from China, ASEAN (Vietnam, Thailand, Indonesia, Philippines and Malaysia), India and Middle-east, etc.
